MOKENA SAYS WELCOME!

5th Homecoming Opens Tonight Aug. 21

It is Homecoming time in Mokena and tonight for the fifth consecutive year the Mokena Civic Association opens the big three day festival which will continue thru Saturday night and Sunday afternoon and evening.

The popularity of the affair has made it necessary to move the midway up another block so that the grounds will extend from in front of the Sippel store and up to the Wannemacher store and will cover all of the depot grounds on the north side of the station. There will be a variety of rides, booths, concessions, exhibits and a host of other interesting attractions. There will be something doing every minute for young and old.

The Civic Association has been planning on this big event for months and the various committees have been especially busy in getting everything in ship shape for the opening night.

The Homecoming will be officially opened tonight August 21, by Attorney C. B. Elder of Mokena, with an address of welcome.

The Mokena Post of the VFW; the Tinley Park Post VFW and the Matteson Legion Post will also have an active part in the event.

The Auxiliary of the Mokena VFW Post will be in charge of a new feature this year, that of crowning a Homecoming Queen. The crowning ceremony will be in charge of a committee consisting of Mrs. Fred Steinhagen, Mrs. Morry Larson and Mrs. Fred Hentsch. The Queen has not been announced as yet.

The exhibits will consist of antiques, needle work, floral displays, craftsmanship, etc. These will be in charge of the PTA, Boy and Girl Scouts, Church groups and the Mokena Garden Club.

The Mokena PTA will have charge of the refreshment tent serving hot or cold sandwiches, coffee and soft drinks.

A very elaborate entertainment program has been arranged. The program opens Friday night, Aug. 21st, with a concert by the Mokena School Band, under the direction of Howard Strohm. Both Friday and Saturday evening's entertainment features will be offered by the students of the Joliet Conservatory of Music under the direction of Mrs. Geo. Hauser.

Sunday, August 23rd, will be the peak of the Homecoming celebration. A huge parade will take place in the afternoon and will be participated in by the Mokena and Tinley Park VFW Posts and the Matteson Legion Post. Also various local groups, colorful floats by the local business firms.

The Red Cross will have in service and display, a full hospital unit under the direction of Mrs. Hugo Neithammer, R. N., Mrs. Raymond McGuire, Mrs. Joseph Hayden and Dr. E. G. MacMahon the physician in case of need.

There will be a concert in the evening by the Chicago Heights Kiwanis band directed by Edwin Hirsch. Other numbers will be contributed by Miss Dorothy Robson, well known Palos Park radio singer who was heard here last year; Leon Tonn, Mokena; Shirley Jungles, Lockport who has appeared on the Morris B. Sachs Amateur Show in Chicago; and the New Lenox Barbershop Quartette the Bennett and Kayser groups.

Last year over 5,000 persons attended the Homecoming and it is hoped this number will be greatly increased this year. The Mokena Civic Association lays particular stress on the fact that it is going "all out for Uncle Sam" as the entire net proceeds will be used for War Bonds, USO, Red Cross and Civilian Defense.

Wasted money is wasted lives. Don't waste precious lives. Every dollar you can spare should be used to buy War Bonds. Buy your ten percent every pay day.

Bicycle Parade Special Program

This year the Mokena Civic Association is offering cash prizes for the best decorated bicycles entered in the big Homecoming parade which will take place Sunday afternoon August 23. Prizes will be as follows:

Best dressed girl and boy rider; best decorated girl and boy bicycle; best comic girl and boy bicyclist. Get your bikes out and try for a prize.

Visit The Antique Exhibit

There will be an antique exhibit as usual this year, so be looking in your cupboards and attics for interesting articles to display. You are to bring your antiques to the tent this Friday, August 21, between 1 p.m. and 4 p.m. If these hours are not convenient you may leave articles before hand at Mrs. Dunn's. The needlework is to be brought during the same hours.

The exhibits tent will be open Friday for arrangement and receipt of exhibits. The committee is anxious to have the following types of exhibits brought in on that day:

Flowers, Vegetables, Canned goods. Please bring them between the hours of 9 and 11 a.m. They will be judged early in the afternoon.

A very fine exhibit of antiques and articles of local interest will be arranged.

No farm produce will be shown competitively. The committee welcomes any exhibits of such a nature where outstanding merit is shown, but it is too early in the year to make a competitive competition possible. Ribbons will be awarded as in years past.

First President of Civic Association

Yes sir! Ladies and gentlemen, believe it or not, here is the first president of the Mokena Civic Association. You say, you do not know him? Why, of course you do, for it is none other than Robert A. Bechstein when he was a rolly olly bouncing baby boy. Sure we knew you would recognize him. When was this photo taken? Well, now Mr. Bechstein is rather modest about his age, something like a lady would be, so we better not say.

LONG MAY IT WAVE

News of Mokena 58 Years Ago

In years gone by Mokena has been served with weekly newspapers which were either printed in Lockport or Lemont, but bore the name of Mokena.

The News-Bulletin has a copy of the "Mokena Commercial Advertiser" dated "Mokena, Illinois, April 10, 1884". The paper was then in its sixth year and the subscription price was $1 per year in advance. The paper had as its slogan "Home news first, the world afterward." The paper consisted of four pages with 8 columns to the page. The issue mentioned had a very fine run of advertising from Lemont, Lockport, Mokena, Frankfort, Joliet and other towns.

Here are samples of the advs. Mokena business men ran 58 years ago:

R. H. TURNER

Gives particular attention to horse shoeing. Curing diseased feet a specialty. All kinds of repairing done on short notice in a workman-like manner.

J. MAVIS

Nachbour & Nicolaus, one of Joliet's Department Stores of that day had a big display adv. on silk sale. Silks were priced from 25c a yard up to $2.

Even the Rock Island railroad was a good advertiser at that time running a display adv. on their passenger service to northwestern points. The road was then known as the "Great Rock Island Route" also as the "Albert Lea Route". R. R. Cable was the vice president and E. St. John was the general ticket and passenger agent.

In addition to local advertising, the old Advertiser also had a good run of national and patent medicine advs.

News from Lockport, Lemont, Homer, Frankfort and Mokena made up a good share of the reading matter. The following Mokena items appeared in the issue mentioned:

Best Standard Oil at 18 cents per gallon at J. Mavis.

Fine oranges and lemons, 25c per dozen at J. W. Ducker's.

Frank Pierce has returned home from Lehman's troupe.

Wm. Jacobs is now working and filling up the Past Hall, which burned to the ground three years ago.

Arthur McGovney, Wright Jones's sisters and cousins have been taking in the skating rink at Joliet the past few days.

We do not suppose Capt. Kuader makes a 4 mile trip for nothing over here.

All the young bloods were out on the track Sunday a walking.

Thirteen pounds of Standard A Sugar for $1 at J. W. Ducker's.

The quartette was seen at the gate the other evening.

Ready made clothing, good fit, and very low prices at Stoll's.

Several strangers were here lately prospecting for the new R. E. which is spoken of going through our town or east of it.

HERE ARE SOME OLD TIMERS

One of the leading business places in Mokena about half a century ago was conducted by Simon Hohenstein now deceased.

Mr. Hohenstein did a thriving business as the local representative of the McCormick Harvesting Co. handling their line of farm implements. Mr. Hohenstein built the structure which was converted by the late Geo. J. Hacker into a store and dwelling occupied by Orville Werner.

In addition to the implement business, Mr. Hohenstein conducted a tavern and also lived in the building now owned by Milton Krapp and in which he conducted a hardware store a number of years ago, part of which is now vacant.

Some years later Mr. Hohenstein purchased the Enders Cottage across the street from the tavern and moved his family in the new quarters. Later on he quit the farm implement business, also the tavern and sold the property.

Mr. Hohenstein was a quite outstanding citizen in his day. He served as supervisor of Frankfort Township, was a member of the Mokena Village board and in his later years was also postmaster. He held many other public offices during his residence here and for many years served as guard at the Joliet penitentiary.

Mrs. Simon Hohenstein, daughter Amada, Simon Hohenstein, Robert Turner, Dr. Wm. Becker, Herman Gieger, John Aschenbrenner, Jack O'Neill, Edward and Wm. Stellwagen.

Special attention is directed to the old style picket fence so popular at one time and the hitching racks, a reminder of the good old horse and buggy days of long ago.

The building is still standing and has been remodeled and does not look like the old landmark pictured.

Note the old style small pane windows, shutters on the windows and wooden sidewalks.

Of all those shown on the picture only three are living today, namely, Dan Hohenstein, New Lenox, Amada now Mrs. Oliver Forrest of Danville, and Edward Stellwagen of Harvey.

Blacksmithing Is Fast Vanishing As A Trade

We perhaps all remember the famous old poem about the blacksmith shop under the spreading chestnut tree and there was a time when most of the villages had either one or two blacksmith shops, and Mokena today has the distinction of being the only town for many miles around that still has two blacksmith shops conducted by Albert Braun and William Helenhouse. Both still shoe horses, sharpen plow shares and do wagon repair work.

Mr. Braun who learned his trade in the shop of the late Fred Schoenherr in Frankfort has conducted a blacksmith shop and repair shop on Front street in Mokena in the building operated by his father many years ago.

Mr. Helenhouse has his shop located in a building erected by the dairy farmers of this section over 30 years ago as a milk plant when they went on a strike against the Bowman Dairy Co. Mr. Helenhouse has been located in the same building ever since he opened his blacksmith shop in Mokena. He is a very busy man and goes out on farms to shoe horses. He has calls up to Lockport and other parts of Will County.

The blacksmith business has been dying out with the advent of the automobiles and trucks until now it is hard to find a real blacksmith of the old time school. These men learned their trade in the practical way and there was no theory about it.

The shortage of metal materials is also beginning to effect this line of business and old dobbin will probably have to wear second hand shoes too.

With the automobiles and trucks being shelved by the war conditions the horse is again coming into his own, but the old time blacksmith, however is fast disappearing.

Both Mokena blacksmiths have put many thousands of horse shoes on horses' hoofs during their long years at the trade and both have shod some quite wild horses and can tell some quite exciting stories in this respect.

Years ago the blacksmith shops had signs showing a horse head inside of a horse shoe, but today, few of these signs are to be seen.

New Ride Attractions Added To Homecoming

When you attend the Mokena Homecoming be sure to see and ride the new rides which have been added to the entertainment list this year. By adding the new features it has made it necessary to add another block of Front street to provide space for the attractions.

The Belles of Mokena Guess Who

News of Mokena Fifty-eight Years Ago

Elijah McGovney has been very sick lately, but is slowly improving.

The celebrated "Eocene" kerosene oil at J. W. Ducker's for 18 cents per gallon, or at the rate of 17 1-2 cents per gallon for five.

A large crowd gathered at the depot last Sunday to see the new couple off, much joy was wished them on their trip to England. We are probably to lose another soon, or probably two.

A nice line of overalls, jackets, hats and caps, boots, shoes, &c., at Stoll's, the corner store.

Mr. Franz Miller has bought his son a milk route in Chicago. Very good Mr. Miller.

The German Evangelist church was filled to its utmost capacity last Sunday—not even standing room on account of the large class of children being confirmed. After the confirmation the scholars presented the minister with a goldheaded ebony cane, as a token of friendship.

Mr. John Marti, Sr., who has been quite sick of late, is so far as to be able to be around again.

John Liess has sold his property and expects to move to Mokena. Come right along, John.

Quite a number of our citizens were called to Joliet by the Deputy Sheriff Collins, to serve as jurors on the R. R. and Property Holders. Mr. Stoll was the only man that was taken from the lot.

The new M. E. Church at Goodings Grove, will be dedicated to Divine worship at 2 o'clock in the afternoon on April 13th, 1884. The Presiding Elder of the Joliet District, Rev. J. M. Caldwell, will officiate on this occasion. All are invited to attend and enjoy this opening service, in the new beautiful church so recently built. No service at Mokena next Sunday.

Old Papers Recall A Mokena Tragedy

Old time residents of Mokena recall that about 45 years ago Mokena experienced a shocking tragedy when one of its well known young men, Otis Turner was killed by a bursting mill stone. He was the son of a pioneer Mokena family, namely the Robert H. Turner family.

The following account of the tragedy appeared in a Will County weekly paper:

Otis Turner, 16 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Turner of Mokena, was instantly killed Wednesday afternoon about 1 o'clock. Young Turner was employed in Mr. Hilton's feed mill, of which Mr. Wetmore was in charge. Mr. Wetmore went to the postoffice, but before going he cautioned his helper against starting the machinery. Young Turner disobeyed the injunction and started the engine which ran the grinding wheels. All at once the belt of the governor snapped, sending the engine at work at a terrific speed. Before Otis could leave the room, the grinding stone burst, hurling a 40 pound piece at the lad's head, crushing it to a pulp. Noise of the machinery working at so terrific a speed, and the flying stone, attracted the attention of those near by. Mr. Wetmore hurried to the place to stop the engine, but already considerable damage had been done to the building and contents.

The coroner's inquest upon the body of the boy exonerated everybody from blame, it being shown that he had disobeyed orders.

LAKE CAPTAIN WAS WELL KNOWN MOKENA RESIDENT

Many years ago Mokena was the home of a one time captain of a ship on Lake Michigan. He was Captain Frederick Henrichsen. He lived in the present Robert A. Bechstein home in Mokena. After retiring from sailing on Lake Michigan, he lived in Mokena.

For several years after the death of his wife, Capt. Henrichsen lived alone. One Sunday morning in Feb. 1897, the captain was found unconscious in his home by a neighbor. The cause was soon discovered. He had turned the damper in the pipe of a hard coal burner nearly off and the gas had become very dense. He died at the age of 81 years and at that time was one of the oldest residents of Mokena.

Capt. Henrichsen was the grandfather of Mrs. Wm. Mancke, Sr., now residing in Tinley Park.

Civic Association Is Big Asset To Mokena

The Mokena Civic Association is the liveliest organization of local men that Mokena has had in many years. The Association is the out growth of an effort which was made to form a local Lions Club. This effort failed and instead the Civic Association was formed with Robert A. Bechstein as its first president.

This live-wire group has truly been civic minded. It has sponsored the annual Mokena Homecoming, has brought good lectures and programs to Mokena; has sponsored observance of Citizenship Day, observance of Memorial Day which formerly had been carried on by the Editor of the News-Bulletin.

The Association was instrumental in getting a skating rink for the young people of Mokena. It also had a cannon placed in the old Pioneer Memorial Cemetery as a memorial to the Revolutionary and Civil War soldiers buried there.

The group has also sponsored a community Christmas tree and program for a number of years and sent Christmas baskets to the needy.

They also placed a bicycle rack at the Mokena school. They have sponsored the Boy Scouts and presented American flags to both the Boy and Girl Scout Troops.

Now in war time the Association has donated to war effort groups and have invested in war bonds.

With the proceeds realized from this year's Homecoming the Association will embark on an all out aid for Uncle Sam by investing and donating in war stamps and bonds and to the Red Cross, USO, etc.

It is hoped that the Civic Association will continue to function as splendidly as it has in the past.

Missed Only One Issue In Quarter Century

The News-Bulletin with this week's issue enters a quarter of a century service to this community. When the News-Bulletin was first launched, the prediction was made it would not last six months, but the dopsters had it all wrong.

William Semmler, the editor and founder of the News-Bulletin first started in the newspaper game in 1910 as local correspondent for the Joliet Weekly News and later was city reporter on that paper until the News was merged with The Joliet Herald in 1915. He then was given a special field consisting of New Lenox, Frankfort, Matteson, Mokena and Tinley Park which he covered as a correspondent and adv. and subscription solicitor. He also represented the job printing firm of Swartz Bros., of Joliet.

Following the death of his father, John Semmler in 1916, he entered the job printing business in his father's former shoe shop. Several years later he founded The News-Bulletin. Outside of a period of several months in the beginning, The News-Bulletin has been set and printed in its present plant located in one of the oldest buildings in Mokena. The News-Bulletin building was built by Martin Heim, the editor's grand father.

The News-Bulletin has been in continuous publication and has only missed one issue during the entire time of its existence, when a shipment of paper was held up by an express strike in Chicago.

WILLIAM SEMMLER, Editor and Publisher,
News-Bulletin, Mokena, Illinois:

I congratulate you on the years of service you have given to this community and I also congratulate the people of Mokena on this Homecoming.

Rationing Chief Lauds Public for Cooperation

Most 'Kicks' Come From Pressure Groups, OPA Administrator Points Out.

By Leon Henderson
Administrator of the OPA

(Because the present rationing program is of paramount interest to every person, this paper presents an exclusive article written for members of the Western Newspaper Union syndicate by Leon Henderson, price control administrator. The views expressed are those of Mr. Henderson.)

There are still a lot of rough spots in rationing, but we know we're on the right track because most of the kicks we're getting are coming from the pressure groups, and comparatively few from the public.

And as more and more rationing becomes necessary, we're going to make more mistakes. But we're going to find them out, and cure them one at a time because that's the way progress is made.

While rationing on the modern scale is unprecedented, rationing itself, is nothing new to Americans. As a matter of fact, it's older than our government itself because the Pilgrims used it at Plymouth Rock to weather the hardships of days of scarcity. Washington, of course, was the nation's first rationing administrator. Indomitable courage, and rationing, brought his men through Valley Forge. Rationing played a great part in the settling of the West because many of those hardy pioneers would never have made it across the desert if they hadn't pooled all their supplies and shared alike.

Fight for Life Itself.

Now that our nation faces a fight for life itself, we're using this valuable tool to insure the necessities of life to every American so that we can all pitch in on the one big job of winning the war. That's what rationing really amounts to. The public, I believe, is realizing that rationing is a protective measure for the individual and the country instead of an unnecessary restrictive device, and they are supporting it, by and large, as they are supporting our other necessary war measures. Most of the criticisms that come to us from the public are from people who really don't understand the purposes of rationing programs and why they are necessary, or those who have been misled by selfish interests seeking to destroy rationing, into the belief that it is not necessary, or that it is being done simply to make our people aware of the seriousness of the war.

Six Commodities Rationed.

In the first eight months of war for our country, we have had to ration six commodities: sugar, tires, autos, typewriters, bicycles, and in the East, gasoline.

Very briefly, here are the reasons: We can't ship enough sugar into the United States to give everyone all he wants of it; therefore, we ration sugar so everyone can have a fair share.

Our principal source of rubber is cut off; we can't make enough tires for everyone; therefore, we ration tires to serve our country's most vital needs.

We need our auto factories for war production. No more autos. So we ration what autos we have on hand to serve the country's greatest needs.

We need all the typewriter factories for manufacture of shells, gun parts and other war supplies. Typewriter production stops, so we ration the typewriters we have on hand to meet our most essential needs.

We need the metals and rubber that go into bicycles, for war production. No more bicycles. So we ration the bicycles we have left to those who really need them.

In the East, we can't get enough gasoline because we haven't enough tankers or other facilities to transport all it takes to run all cars as usual without hampering our war effort. So we ration gasoline to give every essential user enough for his actual needs.

Each Problem a New One. While the underlying purposes of these rationing programs can be stated that simply, the working out of the machinery to make them effective and fair to our 130 million people is quite another matter. Even if we had the benefit of long experience in such work, the launching of a new rationing program would still be a man-sized job. But would still be a man-sized job. But to work out rationing systems for

Constructive Criticism Invited

The public has been wonderfully patient because most people know how difficult such a job must be. The constructive criticism of the large numbers of persons who have written to us, and of the loyal newspapers of the country have been a great aid in helping us plan soundly. We eagerly invite such constructive criticism.—Henderson.

130 million people is something new under the sun. Never before in history has it been done. Every problem that arises is a new problem. We can't call in the experts, because there are no experts. We have to work it out on what seems to be the soundest possible basis, and when we find we're wrong, and our plans don't work, we have to go back and change them. We're learning as we go.

But we have been beset on the other hand by another kind of criticism that has not been helpful. Our rationing programs have been subjected to criticisms and attacks from enemy and selfish interests whose sole purpose was to destroy public confidence in rationing; to wreck the system.

These enemy attacks were designed to hamper our war effort by spreading confusion and dissatisfaction on the home front as one phase of the Axis propaganda activities in the United States. This of course emanated from the offices of the former Bund members and other enemy agents and is dealt with whenever the FBI breaks up the work of spies and saboteurs.

Downright Selfishness. But the other is the result of downright selfishness as opposed to the higher interests of our war effort. There have been some—and fortunately the number is small considering the size of our country—who have sought to wreck our rationing programs because their own personal profits from the sale of the rationed commodities were reduced. They have sought to do this by citing misleading figures in attempts to prove that shortages do not exist in the rationed commodity in which they hold an interest, and that rationing therefore should be discarded.

OPA Administrator

LEON HENDERSON

"Never before in history has it been done..."

These people, whether they realize it or not, are committing an unpatriotic act. They are putting their dollar profits ahead of their country's interests, and are trying to bargain their hopes for future freedom for the quick financial gain that would come from frantic hoarding by a panic-stricken people.

It is not sufficient for good Americans simply to ignore the attacks made by these selfish interests. We should all be vocal in our denunciation of such propaganda and demand that every person making such unwarranted statements designed to wreck our rationing programs, back those statements with facts to prove them.

End False Rumor.

This does not mean that American citizens should be denied the right to express their opinions on rationing, or any other subject. I am simply asking that Americans who know the importance of assuring fair, orderly distribution of commodities that become scarce during our war effort, place every selfish critic of rationing in the position of having to prove everything he says. We can thus bring to an end much of the false rumor and insidious propaganda that has beset our efforts to do a necessary job.

Paint Scarcity Looms, Home Economist Gives Hints on Its Best Use

College Station, Texas.—Before long, paints of many types are going to become scarce.

Mrs. Bernice Clayton, specialist in home improvement for the A. and M. college extension service, says shortages will be felt especially in paints, varnishes, and enamels for interiors. The reason is, these require natural or synthetic resins.

For some time synthetic resins have been earmarked for exclusive war use, and lately the War Production board has ordered a 50 per cent cut in the amount of natural resins manufactured for civilian purposes.

Here are some of the specialist's suggestions for choosing and using interior paints to the best advantage.

Semi-gloss paint, which washes well and is not too harsh in appearance, is suitable for kitchens and bathrooms.

Flat paint gives a "soft" appearance and is best for large areas such as walls and ceilings. It soils less quickly than gloss paint, but it will not stand up as well under washing.

Calcimine is the cheapest wall paint available. Though it cannot be cleaned, it can be washed off entirely and a new coat applied.

The specialist cautions: "Don't use calcimine on smooth woodwork or on walls which have been covered with oil paint." The coating eventually will chip off and make later re-painting far harder.

Enamel should be used only on very smooth surfaces, for it makes holes, chips, and scars more noticeable.

Homemakers who want to avoid the trouble of sandpapering and planing uneven surfaces, should use a gloss or semi-gloss paint instead of enamel.

With other scarcities looming, homemakers have been requested by many universities' extension specialists and government officials to file clippings which describe how such material can be efficiently used.

NUTRITIONIST TELLS HOW TO GET BOUYANT HEALTH

Urbana, Ill.—Folks can't help but know when they possess that much sought after prize—buoyant health, according to Mrs. Nettie Esselbaugh, home economics nutritionist, University of Illinois.

The fact is they feel wonderful. They feel capable of tackling most any job. They're pleasantly tired at the end of a full day but have a satisfied, happy feeling of having done a job well.

And they're all set to begin again

the next morning.

There's no tired, dragged-out feeling, no languid appetite, headache, nervousness, irritability, constipation and other annoying ailments which can be traced back to the fact that they are not getting the right food in the right amounts.

Many ailments are so common and generally accepted by everybody that it never occurs to some folks that they can help themselves to health by eating more of the vital "protective" foods, rich in vitamins, minerals and proteins, the nutritionist suggested. These liabilities usually do not receive the attention of the doctor, but quietly undermine health and stamina.

Health of the teeth, sharpness of eyesight, mental alertness, bone formation and maintenance, as well as digestive disorders, are influenced by what people choose to eat—or rather not to eat.

Sub Chasers Instead of More Ships? . . . What About Over-Optimism Concerning the War?

Bell Syndicate—WNU Features.

WASHINGTON. — Cancellation of the contract for a new shipyard near New Orleans has been distorted by some persons into a belief that the administration is figuring on a short war. The explanation given by the Maritime commission—that the steel a new yard would require is needed for other war purposes—is correct.

As a matter of fact the starting of aluminum plant in New York, which is not expected to get into production for a year, is the best answer. New York is far from an ideal site for any war plant—too convenient for a surprise bombing attack. However, there was another consideration which entered into this decision. Unemployment in New York city has become a problem, and the government wanted to do something about it.

Adding one more plant would not greatly complicate the bombing risk. It is frankly admitted that bombs dropped anywhere around New York would do plenty of dollar damage, and, in entirely too many locations, war damage as well.

Folks are accustomed to magazine articles telling what big bombs would do to the New York skyscrapers. Actually the government would infinitely prefer the destruction of half a dozen of them to 10 per cent of that dollar damage in other New York areas, where plants are turning out badly needed war material.

Safe From Bombing

Fortunately, most of the aluminum plants of the country are located in spots as safe from bombing as though they had been planned for war conditions, which they definitely were not. But the whole situation of war production has developed to a point where safety from bombing is not the most important consideration.

The No. 1 requisite now has become human transportation—that is, the selection of a site convenient to a large supply of labor.

Cancellation of the ship yard contract, however, is a straw in a more important direction so far as war policy is concerned than either the location of plants or guesses as to the duration of the war. It indicates that the group which has been advocating more submarine chasers instead of more submarine targets has scored.

It has been known for months that Harry Hopkins, closest person to the President, was favorably impressed with the idea of building more corvettes, destroyers and other PTs to combat the submarines rather than putting additional steel—over estimates already approved—into more ships.

The idea here is that if our forces sink one submarine we have saved an indefinite number of merchant ships.

War Situation on 8 Fronts Critical

High administration officials are worried about what they regard as the excessive optimism of the people generally with respect to the war. The war, they tell you privately, is not going well.

The situation on eight different fronts is critical.

1. Russia—specifically the Nazi drive toward the Caucasus.
2. Shipping—because enemy submarines are actually increasing in number, and because ship sinkings exceed new construction, and have for some time.
3. The North Pacific—where the Japanese landings on the Aleutians seem to cause more worry than newspaper articles indicate.
4. North Africa—where no one knows when Rommel may begin another successful offensive threatening Alexandria and the Suez canal.
5. China—where the Japanese are making the possible air bases for attack against Nippon more and more distant from their hoped-for targets.
6. The Southwest Pacific—where the Japanese, despite occasional losses, are steadily increasing the efficiency of a possible springboard against Australia.
7. Burma—from which an attack on India can be launched whenever the Japanese desire.
8. Murransk—which is in constant danger from German air attack.

In every one of these theaters of war, which are not listed here in the order of their importance, the situation is menacing. In no one of them is there any reason for the well-informed United Nations military observer to take any comfort. There is not one of the eight which might not suddenly boil over into a tragedy for our side.

Man's Former Wife

Becomes His Sister

ST. JOSEPH, MO.—A St. Joseph man couldn't get along with his wife, so now she is his sister. At their divorce trial the husband's father testified that his daughter-in-law was entitled to a divorce, and she got it. Later her in-laws adopted her as the family's daughter, which made her a sister to her former husband.

Girl Pilot Faints, Ship Lands Safely

Learner Swoons Again on Landing After Trip.

ANN ARBOR, MICH.—Joan Tesch, 19 years old, who has had only four hours of solo flying time, was under treatment for severe shock today as a result of her harrowing experience in flying unconscious in her trainer cabin plane for a full hour last night.

Dwight Reynolds, manager of the Municipal airport, and Robert Young, the girl's instructor, went aloft in their own planes to investigate why Miss Tesch kept circling the field. They were horrified when they saw her slumped against the side of the cabin, unconscious.

They flew around for several minutes, then came down and made preparations for a crash landing. A sheriff's ambulance was called to stand by. Fire extinguishers and first aid equipment were brought out. Dusk gave way to darkness. Still the plane circled aimlessly.

Finally, an hour after her takeoff, Miss Tesch regained consciousness and tried for a landing. Groggy from her experience, she twice missed the field. On the third attempt the motor stalled when her gasoline supply ran out, and she landed without lights in a farm field adjacent to the airport. The plane stopped when it bumped into a fence. Stepping from the plane unscratched, Miss Tesch fainted again before she was taken to the hospital.

Another Boner: Student

Is One Who Uses Brain

BERKELEY, CALIF.—Correcting examination papers at a large university is not all dull routine. Now and then the professors come across some choice "boners."

Here are some gathered in a survey by the Daily Californian student publication of the University of California:

"The dome of St. Clement's is supported by eight peers all of which are unfortunately cracked."

"Browning wrote principally heroic outlets."

"Shakespeare lived at Windsor with his merry wives."

"A spinster is a bachelor's wife."

"The object of 'he' is 'she.'"

"William Tell shot an arrow through an apple while standing on his son's head."

"The opposite of pessimist is bigamist."

"A grass widow is the wife of a vegetarian."

"The Mediterranean and the Red sea are connected by the Sewage canal."

Bible Saved Man in '18; Soldiers of '42 Get Them

LEBANON, TENN.—Because a New Testament saved Ross Neal from death by German shrapnel fragments at St. Mihiel in the first World war, the Lebanon Church of Christ ordered New Testaments which will be sent to all of its members now in service.

Neal, who enlisted at New Orleans in the marine corps at the beginning of the first World war, still has the Testament with an inch-long piece of shrapnel imbedded in its pages, where it struck directly over his heart.

As a gesture of thanksgiving for Neal's escape, the church has ordered 24 Testaments, inscribed with the names of the members now in service, and will send the books to them.

This Soldier Asks for

Town's Dirt and Gets It

CAMP CALLAN, CALIF.—Pvt. Leon Custer, 32, former contract clerk for a Kansas water firm, wrote his girl friend in Wichita, asking for all the "town's dirt."

Later he received a letter from Miss Margaret Hogue, 26, the girl friend. She wrote: "Dear Leon—Enclosed please find some of Wichita's dirt. Sorry I couldn't dig around more."

She signed the note, "With spades and hearts, Margaret."

Accompanying the note of "dirt" was a handful of Kansas top soil!

Here's New Reason Not

To Pilfer Church Box

NEW YORK.—The punch of a six-foot priest must be reckoned with by those who seek to pilfer the poor box of the Sacred Heart church.

The Rev. Father U. T. Gilmartin proved this when he sprinted from his quiet rectory, cassock whipping in the wind, caught the suspected thief, threw a left to his jaw and downed him.

Then he hoisted him to his feet and marched him to the police station, where the man was booked on burglary charges.

Wounded in Sea, Nude U. S. Flyer Walks 80 Miles

Anxious to Get Back Into Fight to Seek Revenge For Slain Buddies.

MELBOURNE, AUSTRALIA.—Shot down at sea and wounded by Japanese fliers as he floated in a life belt, Corp. Louis Murphy, 25-year-old United States airman from Bridgeport, Conn., has reached an Allied base after a two-day swim and 18 days of walking naked and hungry over 80 miles of wild country.

The other crew members of his bomber all apparently were killed in the water by low-diving Japanese planes.

Here is Murphy's own story: "Our bomber had been attacking Lae, New Guinea, when an overwhelming force of Jap Zeros attacked and shot us down. The crew swam about in Mae Wests (brilliant orange colored life belts). The Zeros began machine gunning us, so we separated.

Got Rid of Clothing.

"Seeing that we were likely to be in the water for some time, I got rid of my clothing. Every time the Zeros made a pass at us I dived as deep as possible and remained under until my lungs were nearly bursting. I had to deflate my life belt three times.

"One Zero came down within 100 feet before letting go a burst of bullets. One bullet nipped off the tip of one of my fingers.

"By the time the Zeros left, I struck out for shore, but couldn't make any headway against the current. My buddies were disappearing out to sea.

"By nightfall I was five miles offshore and did not know in what direction to swim. During the afternoon a boat had put out from shore, but I dived, feeling certain it was a Japanese vessel.

"I spent a terrible night, alternately swimming and dozing. Once I dreamed I was back aboard the bomber, bouncing about in a terrible storm.

Tries to Catch Raindrops.

"Next morning I was closer to shore, being carried by a current parallel to the beach. During the day I tried to ease my thirst by opening my mouth to catch raindrops.

"Forty-two hours after the bomber came down I drifted into shallow water and staggered ashore. I spent a few hours recovering some strength and drinking milk from coconuts.

"Naked, without shoes, and with my body already badly sunburned, I set off in the general direction of our base. After seven days I met the survivors of another plane crash, carrying their wounded pilot on a litter.

"I'm dying to get into the fight again. I'll have no mercy on those Japanese for what they did to us in the water."

How U. S. Sailors Braved

Sharks to Aid Wounded

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—Uninjured sailors, led by a heroic officer, jumped into the shark-infested Coral sea to make room in rescue whaleboats for wounded and burned members of their crew, two survivors of the United States naval tanker Neosho revealed today.

E. A. Flaherty, 22 years old, electrician's mate, third class, from St. Louis, Mo., and D. J. Nelson, 22, signalman, third class, from Laurel, Mont., said when the Neosho started to sink in the Coral sea engagement, Lieut. (j. g.) Henry K. Bradford ordered all the men out of the boats to make room for those who were wounded.

"He (Lieutenant Bradford) led the way himself, plunging into the water and grabbing a towline on the boat," Flaherty said. "About 14 or 15 jumped overboard from the whaleboat I was in. The lieutenant and two enlisted men were the only ones ultimately saved that I know of. They were picked up 10 days later from life rafts."

200 Miles Away, Sends

Fire Alarm by Telegraph

MASSILLON, OHIO.—A telegram sent from Fort Wayne, Ind., more than 200 miles from Massillon, notified local firemen of a fire in a house in Walnut Hills, government housing project. The telegram was sent by P. W. Homrighous, who lives in the house and told firemen that when he and Mrs. Homrighous left their home they forgot to detach an electric iron. They did not think about it until they reached Fort Wayne. Firemen rushed to the house, entering with a pass key. Sure enough, they found the electric iron attached and smoke coming from the ironing board.

$20,000 Fortune Found

On Body of Iowa Woman

OSKALOOSA, IOWA.—Although she was not known as a wealthy woman, when Mrs. Lillian Crispin, 81, died, officers found six money bags tied to her waist.

It was estimated that she had been wearing $20,000 when she died. One of the envelopes concealed on her person contained a stack of $20 and $100 bills four inches high.

Like millions of other housewives throughout the U. S., Mrs. Leon Henderson, wife of the Office of Price Administration's head, went through the routine of registering for her sugar rationing book. Dr. Elmer S. Newton, superintendent of Western high school, Washington, D. C., is filling out the application blank for Mrs. Henderson.

The other lady on the left is Mrs. Henry Wallace, wife of the vice president.

GHOST PLANE

By ARTHUR STRINGER W.N.U. SERVICE

CHAPTER XIX

Lynn, following after Alan as he strode toward the lake-front, realized that he was already back in his man's world of violence and conflict. That realization grew even sharper when she saw him abruptly stop at the cliff edge and stare across the lake where the evening wild fowl were feeding in the shallows. At the same time that she saw him drop on one knee and take aim with his rifle she caught sight of two figures running down the opposing shore slope to where a plane of faded blue stood moored against a spruce-fringed bank.

Slade shot twice, but with no apparent effect on the running figures. Lynn could see them swarming about the pontoons and throwing off the mooring gear.

"It's Tumstead and Frayne," Slade cried. "They're getting away with your plane. They're doing what I—"

But Lynn's voice rose above the other.

"There's Father," she cried, "running through the trees, down the bank. He knows they've tricked him."

"Come on," he cried, "we must head them off."

"How?" she asked, panting after him.

"With my plane," he said over his shoulder. "If they get away now they're gone for good."

She kept up with him as they rounded the lake arm and bore down on the Snow-Ball Baby.

"Keep your eye on 'em," Slade called out as he made adjustments to the tail-control over his head. She knew, by the feel of the pulsating structure enclosing her, that he was flying with a full-open throttle.

"What do we do," she demanded, "when we get up with them?"

Slade indicated the rifle that had been thrown into the cabin.

She observed, a moment later, that Slade was climbing a little. She wondered as to the meaning of this maneuver. Then her eyes narrowed with a new wonder. For against the opal and gold of the northern sky she saw yet another pair of wings arrowing out of the distance. Her hope, at the moment, was that it might be the official plane from the Mountie headquarters at Coppermine, that it was help coming when help was most needed. But as she stared out through the paling light she saw that it wasn't a plane. It was a trumpeter swan, breasting the evening air lanes.

It was like a light going out when the duller blue wings of the plane in front of the watching girl veered a little and came between her and the arrowing white body.

That moment of obscured vision left her always in doubt as to how it happened. It might have been a split-second error in judgment. It might have been a final spit of venom on Tumstead's part, a final flowering of hate for what he could accept as the sign and symbol of his final defeat. But as the bird swerved, to avoid its bigger rival, the plane also swerved. They swerved in the same direction, at the same moment, and came together.

Slade banked sharply and turned, with a repeated shout as he saw the blue wings flounder and twist in their fall.

"They've lost control," he cried. "They're down."

He circled blindly, waiting for the crash. Then he dropped lower, marking the spot where the tangle of metal and fabric rested on its bed of broken limestone.

Lynn knew, at his quick glance about, that he was looking for open water on which to land. But she remained silent until the ship was set down and they were ashore.

"Is it the end?" she asked.

"That's what we've got to find out," he said.

He mounted the bank and started running through the scrub, without waiting for her. She followed him, as best she could.

She found Slade waiting for her on one of the limestone ridges. He stood there, staring at the flare that lighted up the evening sky just over the next hill.

"You'd better stay here," he said, his eyes on the glow above the hill-top. He knew well enough what that glow meant.

Lynn watched him as he went over the hill. It seemed a long time before he came back. He flung himself down beside her and sat there silent and dispirited.

"They didn't get away," he finally observed in a voice devoid of all triumph.

Lynn, who had taken her turn at glancing about at their world of rock and water and gold-green twilight, turned back to her tired companion.

"There's nothing to do," said Slade as he rose to his feet, "except to head back while there's still a little light left."

Slade, once more hightailing it homeward from Coppermine, glanced down at the mottled country crawling under his floats.

He drew a little sum on a slide rule, to check his ground speed, looked at his watch, and reached for his earphones. He smiled at the newness of the phones and the newness of the compact little radio set. They made the rest of the Snow-Ball Baby look old and battered. But Stan Cruger had insisted on putting them there. He wanted no more weeks of silence from either of his bush planes. And in fifteen minutes, back at Waterways, Stan was to tune in and get his report.

"They didn't get away," he observed in a voice devoid of all triumph.

Slade, while he waited, worked his dial and heard the silent ether become busy with its multitudinous voices. He caught a whiff of orchestra music from KNX, away off in Los Angeles. He caught a fragmentary message going out from Royal Canadian Signals at Yellowknife, and the air-gossip of pilots to ground-points along the Basin. He picked up snatches of weather reports and flying positions.

Slade shut out the ghostly voices and once more consulted his watch. After a glance ahead and a second glance at his instrument panel he turned back to his radio.

"CF-KCB calling Norland Airways at Waterways. Slade calling Stan Cruger at Waterways. CF-KCB calling Norland at Waterways. . . . Come in, Stan. What's my signal strength? . . . Yes, I hear you fine. I'm forty-three minutes out of Wolf Lake Post heading southwest by south with a pay load of concentrates that ought to make up for that lost week. Yes, I'm feeling fit. But I want to swing in before nine. I've got to."

Slade's smile widened as the voice of his partner took the desolation out of the emptiness.

"I'll be here at the port when you shuffle in," that voice was saying, "and I think there's going to be somebody else waiting. But I wanted to tell you the Kovalevka had been libeled and held off Echo Harbor. . . . The Kovalevka, that Russian icebreaker. . . . And our Lockhead lands at Yellowknife about five today. . . . But wait a minute. Stay in, CF-KCB. Can you hear me, Lindy? There's a lady here waiting to speak to you."

The seconds seemed long as Slade waited.

"Can you hear me, Alan?" a bell-like voice was saying to him. It was only a voice, winging half a thousand miles over a water-spangled wilderness, but it brought a warming glow to his body.

"Yes, darling, I hear you," he answered.

He knew it was Cleaver, working VBK at Coppermine, who at that point cooed across the ether: "And the sugar-lanes will now be open."

"Are you all right?" the bell-like voice asked.

"I'll be better in six hours," Slade announced. "For then I'll be seeing you."

"It will be the longest six hours in my life," Lynn's voice complained. But her laugh was a happy one.

"What did the Padre say about Thursday?" he asked.

"He won't start east until Friday. He's more excited than I am, Alan. The old dear's wired to have orchids and orange blossoms flown in from California."

"But why is he starting east?" questioned Slade.

"He's decided on a twelve-week course at McGill," was Lynn's answer. "He says it's to brush up on his surgery. But I'm hoping they'll hold him there through the winter."

"He's a grand man," Slade proclaimed.

"So is Lindy, lady," a remote and altogether unplaced voice cut in.

"Alan, are you there?" Lynn's softer voice inquired. "There seems to be interference."

"There is," said the unknown.

"But take it from me, lady, he's all right. Congratulations!"

Lynn's laugh came clear.

"Who's your friend out there?" she inquired.

"I think it's Tony Frendall at Fort Smith. I'll reckon with that bird later on."

"We don't seem to have much privacy," said Lynn.

"You don't get it on the air, lady," announced a newer and deeper-throated intruder.

"Then this will have to be all, Alan," the bell-like voice was saying. "Good-by, darling," answered Slade.

He was about to remove his earphones, but a babel of words held his hand arrested.

"So you're going to marry the girl, Lindy!"

He interpreted that as from Cap Bickell on the Basin's mail plane heading north to Herschel.

"I'm telling the world," Slade found the courage to affirm. There was even a ring of defiant pride in his proclamation.

"Perhaps more than you imagine, big boy," an unknown and caustic voice observed through the aerial chatter.

They meant well, Slade remembered as he switched off and removed his earphones. But it made him think of rough high-tops trampling through a flower bed. And he wanted to be alone, under that lonely sky of robin's-egg blue, to think about his happiness.

JACOB'S VISION OF GOD

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 28:10-22. GOLDEN TEXT—I am with thee, and will keep thee in all places whithersoever thou goest.—Genesis 28:15.

Deception, trickery, falsehood, jealousy were all present in the family of Isaac at the time of our lesson. A hopeless situation, one would say; and so it was, apart from one thing—the grace of God. We speak that phrase so easily, but in reality it has an infinite depth of meaning.

Jacob shared the deception planned by his mother, and thereby he received the blessing of Esau. Not willing to wait God's time for the carrying out of His purpose, they sinned to gain an advantage. Then to escape the wrath of Esau, he had to flee. The journey was ostensibly to find a wife, but in fact a flight from an enraged brother. Could such a journey bring a man to a place of blessing? It did, as there was—

I. A Revelation of God's Grace (vv. 10-15).

The fugitive was overtaken by darkness on the second night of his journey, and made his bed in the open. Then came the magnificent vision of the ladder of heaven.

Heaven and earth are not separated. There is a way to reach the throne of God, and there is a way for God to reach and bless His people. The vision of the ladder thus reassured Jacob. We need only remember the God-Man Christ Jesus, who came from glory and has returned there to now appear as our Advocate, to be assured of this fact.

God renewed to Jacob the covenant with Abraham and with Isaac. He does not forget. Men make treaties only to break them. God says, "I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of" (v. 15).

In His matchless grace God relieved Jacob's fear by assuring him of His protection; his loneliness by His divine presence; and his uncertainty regarding the future by the promise of blessing.

II. A Realization of God's Greatness (vv. 16-19).

Full of holy fear and of awe, Jacob realized the presence of the infinite God. It is a proper and a wholesome reaction when a man, realizing himself to be in God's presence, is overcome by the awe-inspiring experience.

Possibly the reason for our lack of reverence for holy things, for the Lord's day—yes, for God Himself, is because He has become a little God, weak and uninspiring in our thinking. Theologians, preachers, and teachers have dared to speak swelling words of disrespect concerning His miraculous power, have denied the deity of His Son, have questioned the authority of His Word. Having sown the wind of unbelief, they have reaped from the people the whirlwind of irreverence, a belittling of God, and a rejection of His authority (Hos. 8:7).

Jacob was reminded of God's immediate presence—"the Lord is in this place." The place of his vision of heavenly things had special meaning to Jacob.

But the underlying truth is that God is everywhere. He is not only in the church, or in the place of vision or of soul-struggle; He is also in the place of trial, of suffering, of sorrow, of loneliness—yes, even of sin. The thing that Jacob "found out that night was not that God visits man, but that God is with man wherever he is. We expect to meet Him in the sanctuary; but He is near us in the market place. . . . Not alone in the sanctuary, but where the multitude gather in defiance of His law, He is there" (G. Campbell Morgan).

This rich experience led Jacob to—

III. A Recognition of God's Goodness (vv. 20-22).

The God who would supply his every need, who would watch over him and keep him, was recognized by Jacob as being worthy of his devotion, and he made a vow that He should be his God (v. 21).

The grace and goodness of God are intended to bring men to faith in Him and devotion to His service. Yet men can go on year after year, the beneficiaries of all His bounty, and never so much as say "Thank you," let alone recognize Him as Lord.

Jacob made a very practical and workable decision to demonstrate the reality of his vow. He promised that one tenth of all God gave him should be given back for a sacred use.

We agree with Dr. W. H. Griffith Thomas that "if only some of those who are inclined to criticize Jacob would do what he promised and give a tenth of their income to God, a different state of affairs would obtain in connection with God's work at home and abroad."

Trickery and deception were changed to truthfulness and devotion when Jacob met God face to face. The same blessed transformation awaits those who meet our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ in faith. Have you met Him?

RADIO COMMERCIALS YOU NEVER HEAR

" . . . And it is generally recognized that a second front is of tremendous importance if civilization is to be saved. Now a word about Twidget's Bread. Mr. Twidget claims only one thing for his bread: it is just good bread. We have been too busy baking good bread to spare much time investigating vitamins. Twidget makes bread the best way he knows how and there have never been any complaints."

"At this time between the Washington news on a second front and the last minute tremendous news from Russia, we wish to mention Twidget's Sugar Buns. But only a mention, not a speech. Darned good buns, we think. We do not, however, claim that our armed forces cannot win the war if deprived of them."

"At this point, after which the news of the greatest naval fight in history, don't forget Boffie's Beer. It's made like most other beer, tastes like most other beer and, as a matter of fact, IS like most other beer. We think, however, it is more popular and our sales so indicate. It will not restore hair, cure intestinal troubles, give you a new outlook on life, solve the whole problem of evenings at home, make you a success in your business or simplify your gas and rubber cares. Boffie's beer is excellent, but we don't want to seem silly about it."

"Pausing for a moment between the tremendous news from Asia and the sensational dispatches from the Near East, we wish to take a few seconds for the Green Mountain Stogies. If they were not a popular stogie where would we get the dough for this radio program? They won't do a thing for you except give you a good smoke. All we can say about the tobacco is that it's the best we can buy. Without making ourselves ridiculous with an infantile melody to the effect that without Green Mountain Stogies life is not worth living, we return to the war news, which we feel a little guilty about interrupting. . . ."

"And now, while civilization battles for its very existence a word about Hunkey's Goo Goo Bars. They're a candy. The kids seem to love 'em. They don't give a whoop whether they are filled with vitamins A B C and D or not. Neither do we. We are conscientious candy makers and know our business. Our sales have doubled since we cut out our somewhat absurd commercials, ditties and jingles and just interrupted this program for a few brief, simple mention of our popular product. We wish we had thought of it before."

"This account of the gravest battle to date is now interrupted for a mention of Zigger's Cooking Grease. Just a mention. There it is. Thank you. And back to the war news!"

RETORT

The reason why a quart of beer displeases you is very clear; For this I say, devoid of fear, A quart is practically NO BEER.

The U. S. post office department reports a big loss. It seems to us that most of the income must go to designing and issuing newer and bigger postage stamps.

Things have reached a point on the highways of America where drivers of horses and buggies are urged to go slow so they won't frighten automobiles.

NO HOPE! Four gallons a week, Four gallons a week; If my car's thirsty Its future is bleak.

The Danbury Fair has been called off on account of the gas and rubber shortage. This is going to throw a lot of cooch dancers, snake charmers, side-show freaks and terrible hawburg freaks out of autumn work.

It is Elmer Twitchell's belief that few things harm the morale of America more than listening to United States congressmen on the Forum of the Air. "You don't know what incoherency is until you have heard 'em," insists Mr. Twitchell.

EVERYONE knows that quick meals in the kitchen save time, but it was both time and space that had to be saved in this kitchen where breakfasts were eaten on the run and the children had but a few minutes for lunch. The problem was solved by building a 16-inch-wide counter under a window and then making simple stools to be slipped under it when not in use.

The stools were painted cream color to match the woodwork and the counter was covered with blue linoleum like the floor covering. Cream colored place mats, napkins and window curtains embroidered in colorful Mexican figures were then added to give a smart note of gaiety.

NOTE: These curtains, mats and napkins were made of flour bags and the figures tell a story of life down Mexico way. A flower seller; a peon on his burro; a caballero with his guitar; a man leading a pig to market, and girls carrying jugs and baskets on their heads are all worked in simple outline stitch. Transfer pattern including enough figures for six mats, six napkins, borders for one pair of curtains and extra figures for several pot holders, is available to our readers. "Fuller," says Aunt Netty, the other day. "Folks are like wine. Some sour with age, and some, like you, get better!"

"Mebbe," says I, pickin' up that little compliment, "that's because I feel so good most of the time." For, you know, folks, when you feel good your disposition's apt to be good, too. But to do that, you got to eat right, which includes gettin' all your vitamins. And KELLOGG'S PEP is extra-rich in the two most often short in ordinary meals—vitamins B₁ and D. Mighty fine-tastin', too. Try it!

Kellogg's Pep

A delicious cereal that supplies per serving (1 oz.): the full minimum daily need of vitamin D; 1/4 the daily need of vitamin B₁.

Dear Friends:

Finally found a little time to write to you folks. Thanks a lot for the Tinley Times and the package you sent me. Everything certainly comes in handy. We are surely having some hot weather around 119 degrees in the shade. This is pretty country down here, but I don't know how much longer I'll be here.

We went on a few hikes this week with full packs. Well folks this is about all for now. I would like to say, hello to all my friends in Tinley and again thanks for everything.

Sincerely yours,
Pvt. Walter W. Diekmann

Dear Friends of Tinley Park:

Received your letter last week and was very glad to hear from you. I am still about the same as usual. I am back on straight duty now.

I wrote you a letter about two weeks ago which was about a week after I received your last package. Thanks a million for it. I can't tell you very much about Missouri as I haven't been around very much. A round the Fort it is rather hilly, lots of rocks, trees, and red mud. There is a lot of pretty country around here though.

I haven't been to any USO so I really can't say anything about them. But I guess they are pretty nice. Lots of the fellows go to them from here. I have been out of the Fort only two times since I arrived here, the 26th of Aug. last, so you see I don't get around much.

There really isn't much use to go out. We have 5 theaters and about 4 service clubs here. And there are 12 past exchange. We even have a grocery store so you see it is just a small town right here on the Fort. You suggest in your letter that I should go to church of some kind. I have beaten you to the punch there.

I have been going to church pretty near every Sunday since last Dec. I am on guard tonight. Went on at 5 tonight get off at 5 tomorrow night. Well I guess I'll have to close as I got to drop a few lines to the folks. Thanks a million for all you are doing for us fellows.

Sincerely, your friend,

Dear Friends:

I haven't written to you for some time, but as I have been on the move constantly for quite a while I was unable to keep up very much correspondence. I have a new address now and I certainly hope that you will mail the Times to me as you have done in the past. Frankly I miss all the hometown news, and more so since up here it takes considerable time for letters to travel, back and forth. My new address is:

Corp. T Orville A. Harms, 36038-374, 693rd QM Platoon LM (Avn.) 6th Air Depot Group, AAF, APO 938 care Postmaster, Seattle, Washington

I thank you very much for sending the paper to me. As you can see by the heading I am still in the good old United States territory, and that is a grand feeling, even though we are outside of the continental United States. There isn't much I can say, concerning Alaska, but I will say that it reminds me very much of good old Illinois. I have seen the sun shine at midnight, and also I have yet to see it get dark. However, the lack of darkness now will be made up for when the winter night sets in then it will be dark all the time.

Since the last time I wrote I have been promoted to Corporal Technical. I am hoping that maybe some of my friends will catch sight of my address the "Times" and drop me a line or two. About the only pastime that we have up here is to write letters and the more letters that we write the quicker the time passes.

They do have a nice USO Center here like they have close to all the camps in the States. It is a very nice place for the soldiers to go and relax. Like I have said in the past, the USO is doing wonders for the lonely soldiers. Thanking you for your interest in seeing that I get the good old Times, I remain,

Your friend,

Dear Friends:

Just a few lines to let you know of a change in my address. It's a new field about 8 miles from Lowry Field and is also a Technical school for the Air Corp.

I also received your package a few weeks ago and wish to thank you very much for it. Am also receiving the Tinley Times every week.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Folks:

I can't write what you would like I guess you know how it is.

The scenery out here is very beautiful in fact I think it has California beat. I see big sugar cane fields, big fields of pineapples growing as well as banana trees regularly.

Was on pass to Honolulu last Wednesday. It is nothing like the cities at home back in the States though. About all you see are Chinese and Japanese. That is the way they look to me at least.

If you buy something out here you sure have to pay for it. I bought myself a couple pair of socks and had to pay 40 cents a pair for them, which you can buy at home in the dime store for 10 cents. We have ice cream out here too but you get just half as much for 10 cents here as at home. Just a single dip.

The weather is always very nice out here, sometimes in fact it gets a little hot. But the hot weather out here is not near as bad as back home as there is not near so much humidity. Sometimes we have spells of showery weather, but it isn't muddy when it rains as the showers usually don't last longer than 5 minutes, and by the time the next one comes around the sun has already has it nice and dry.

Was promoted to the grade of Private First Class sometime ago and was sure glad I was made a Pfc. Spare time around here is very short and never have much leisure time. Sometime ago we unloaded several carloads of food so you see what we all have to do. Was to a show last night and I think I might try to see the picture that is showing to-night as it is a pretty good one I think. Really never go to many shows. Don't know much about the news lately at all. I haven't seen a paper or heard a radio for over a week, so don't know what's going on. Anyway I hope most of the news is good. Get your letters OK generally in 6 or 8 days, so write often as I am always glad to hear from home.

Finally had three photographs taken of myself as you asked, while on pass. They will cost me $7, so they ought to be pretty good. At least I hope so. Have quit gaining weight at last which is a relief but stopped on just 200 pounds. Always feel fine and have been well so far.

Suppose you are always busy at home. Have been gone from home very nearly a year now, and while it doesn't seem that long would sure like to see good old Illinois. Don't worry we will do our darnest if those yellowbellies as we call them here ever try to show up.

Well guess this will be all for this time as I don't know any more to write. With all my love,

Your son, Edwin.

Army Show
Coming To Soldiers Field

Every phase of Army life, including a realistic battle action, will be vividly demonstrated when the United States War Department's Army War Show is presented at Soldier Field, Chicago, September 2 through September 12, the proceeds of which will go to the Army Emergency Relief Fund.

Arranged primarily to give the citizens a concrete idea of methods used in training our soldiers and a chance to see all army implements of warfare in action, more than one million persons have been thrilled in Baltimore, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Akron, Detroit and Milwaukee and arrangements are being made to handle almost another million at the 11 night engagement at Soldier Field.

It is believed that more than two million dollars will be raised for the Army Emergency Relief Fund on the tour of some 15 leading cities.

Some 2,000 officers and enlisted men under the Command of Colonel Wilson T. Bals comprise the Task Force presenting Here's Your Army, and the trainees do their regulation work daily the same as other soldiers at camps all over the nation in addition to the nightly exhibitions. Experience gained on this tour will make this Task Force one of the finest trained in the Army, and it is ready for immediate duty as the men are supplied with live ammunition and Emergency rations.

The War Department's representative with the Army Show is Major Charles Spencer Hart, A. U. S., who served in a similar capacity during the last war, and co operating with him is Mayor Edward J. Kelly, general chairman of the Chicago Civilian Committee.

Official headquarters for the Chicago engagement have been established at 22 E. Randolph St., where an intensive advance ticket sale will be conducted. Souvenir tickets will be offered in advance for 55 cents, which will entitle the holder to see any one of the night performances in addition to admission to the Battle Depot, a gigantic display of Army equipment.

Admission to the Battle Depot will be 25 cents, a saving to holders of Souvenir Tickets and they will also have a receipt showing that the purchaser is a contributor to the Army Emergency Relief.

To Hold Cook Co.
Home Bureau Picnic
at Santa Fe Park

The annual Farm Bureau-Home Bureau picnic of Cook County will be held at Santa Fe Park Wednesday, August 26th. It will feature the agricultural exhibits of the 4H clubs of Cook County. We believe farmers should show an increased interest in the work that the 4H boys and girls of the county are doing at their annual show. During the day there will be entertainment and games for both young and old.

One of the special features that will be exhibited this year is a Red Cross exhibit of their ambulance units and emergency stations. As the Red Cross is performing a very vital service to the young men of our country in following them into the war zones and giving them the service that the acts of war bring about, we believe that the farm people of Cook County will be interested in seeing this exhibit at the Farm Bureau Picnic.

Your electric cords are precious —

MAKE THEM LAST!

Electric cords are made mostly of rubber and copper—two materials that are much in demand these days! Check the electric cords in your home, using this guide. Make them last just as long as they were designed to last!

HOW TO MAKE CORDS LAST LONGER

There are three things that commonly cause your cords to wear out:

1. FRICTION. When disconnecting, don't yank on the cord—take hold of the plug. Never let a cord become twisted or knotted. When not in use, hang it over two widely separated hooks, so there will be no sharp bend. Never run cords under carpets, or nail them to the wall or floor. Be sure they are away from moving parts of appliances.

2. HEAT. Keep cords away from radiators or steam pipes. Even direct sunlight will shorten the life of the rubber in a cord.

3. MOISTURE. Don't let electric cords get wet. Even rubber-covered extensions will in time absorb water.

WHERE TO LOOK FOR DAMAGED CORDS

Appliance cords wear most quickly at the points where the cord enters the appliance and the plug. Check the cords on your lamp bases, electric fans, irons and other frequently moved appliances.

WHAT TO DO ABOUT DAMAGED CORDS

Never try to push worn cords out of sight—they should be fixed immediately. Unless you are sure of your repairing skill, call an electrician. He can often re-use most of the old cord, and you know the job is done right!

Nature's Sugar Factory at Work

Sugar of some kind is found in the sap of every living plant. Nature stores more sugar in the sugar beet and the sugar cane than in other plants, and for that reason they have become the chief sources of the world's sugar supply.

Sugar is formed in plants through a process of photosynthesis, which is illustrated in the case of the sugar beet in the accompanying diagram.

In this process, carbon dioxide from the air and water from the soil are combined within the plant through the agency of green pigment known as chlorophyll. In the presence of light for that reason sugar is often called "crystallized sunshine and water." The sugar which is manufactured within the green parts of the sugar beet is used principally for growth during the early part of the beet's life, but later in the season most of the sugar is stored in the root where it is stored.

To the scientist sugar is "sucrose," and in its pure form even chemists cannot tell whether it came from the sugar beet or the sugar cane. Sugar from beets is identical with sugar from cane in appearance, sweetness, quality, and food value, and they may be used interchangeably for all purposes.

In 1942, according to estimates of the Office of Price Administration, which directs the sugar-rationing program, beet sugar will be the most important single source of our national sugar supply. Within a few weeks farmers of nineteen states will begin the harvest of more than one million acres of sugar beets. The crop is expected to produce approximately two million tons of sugar, enough to give a weekly ration of eight ounces for one year to every person in the United States. It is expected to be the largest crop in history.

It's a Good Morning With Flapjacks in Syrup!
(See Recipes Below.)

Breakfast Time

Whether you wake to the crowing of the rooster or the jingle of an alarm clock, it's a signal to be up and about seeing to the day's work. But first! A hearty breakfast is in order so that the system can get started on its day's routine in the proper form. No matter whether it's for the head of the family going off to the defense plant, daughter on her way to the nurses' aid class, mother or the youngsters, no one should skip blithely over this meal of the day.

For years doctors and dieticians have looked askance at those who passed up a real up-and-at-them breakfast because it doesn't give the body a chance to start functioning early in the day. If you're fat, you need fruit-egg-toast-and-beverage breakfasts to start your metabolism working at top speed to start tearing down of excess tissues.

If you're thin, then you need just as much of a breakfast with a few more trimmings, to start building yourself. If you're normal, you still need the hearty breakfast so you can maintain your health and give your body its daily nutritional requirements. And one of the best recommendations for a real breakfast is the good way it starts you on your day's work. None of that drowsy, it's-hard-to-wake-up-in-the-morning feeling. No, Ma'am!

Hardest thing about breakfasts is that it's easy to get into a rut by serving the same foods morning-after-morning. This is rather strange, considering how much time and effort is spent on getting variety into the other two-squares a day. Well, why not variety for breakfast?

You can have this variety in fruit. Yes, I know you like juice pretty well, but you'll get out of the morning doldrums quickly enough if you punctuate the breakfast with favorite fruits-in-season, other fruit juices and some of those canned fruits you put up during the summer months.

Toast? If you insist on toast, try using whole wheat, rye, raisin, cracked wheat, etc. Naturally, the bread should be enriched so you'll get the most out of toast. And then there are all sorts of hot breads that will send the family cheering off to work—blueberry muffins, pecan rolls, muffins, and flapjacks!

Eggs in all manner of ways are a good standby. Poached, fried, codded, baked, scrambled, a la golden-rod, or combined with ham, sizzlin'!

Lynn Says:

Tips for Breakfast Fruits: You're going to be a little short on sugar so do the most with what you have. A little salt in cooked fruit or sprinkled on such things as melons brings out true fruit flavor, requires less sugar. Lemon or lime juice with melon enhances the natural sweetness. Try it.

Orange juice, chilled before the fruit is squeezed, is an excellent pep-up. Let the sugar stand on grapefruit a while (while the coffee percolates) and the sugar will melt and go further. Try eating fruit or juice first, but saving half to finish off your breakfast—it will leave a fresh taste in your mouth.

Fruit stewed should have sugar added after it is stewed, with a pinch of salt. You won't need as much sweetening, this way.

Cook dried fruits with a slice of lemon or orange. These citrus fruits have an affinity with dried apricots, peaches, prunes and apples.

sausage or crisp brown bacon—there you have a week's ideas.

The Cereals.

At least one serving of cereals is the nutrition requirement for the day. This is most easily served at breakfast, with cream and sugar and perhaps a few slices of fresh fruit or berries. Ready-prepared cereals are delightful, especially in the warmer weather—they're crisp, light, and nutritious. Recently some of the prepared cereals have been scientifically restored so they have all the whole-grain richness and nutritive value in them.

Light as down flapjacks are a welcome sight at breakfast! Try these:

*Feather Fluff Griddle Cakes.
(Makes about 18 cakes)

2 eggs, well beaten
2 cups rich sour milk or buttermilk
1½ cups white flour
½ cup prepared pancake flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder

Have all ingredients at room temperature. Sift dry ingredients thoroughly. Add milk to eggs. Gradually stir in dry ingredients. Stir just enough to make a smooth batter. Cook on ungreased griddle. Try out one cake and if batter is too thick, add a little more milk.

Fried eggs are good to serve with these griddle cakes. Fry them thus: Slip eggs into a scant ½ inch layer of moderately hot fat. Cook at moderate heat, dipping fat over eggs to cook to desired doneness. Turn, if desired. Serve at once on warmed platter.

Sunday Breakfast.

Place sausage links in a frying pan, add a small amount of water. Do not prick the skins. Cover and let steam 5 minutes, then drain.

Cook over slow heat, add 3 tablespoons of peach juice to 8 sausages and let brown. Serve with poached eggs on top of toasted English muffins. Red currant jelly or golden peach jam makes a delectable dish.

If you've never tried old-fashioned scrapple, you have a real treat a-comin' to you:

Pork Sausage Scrapple.
(Serves 6 to 8)

2 cups cornmeal
4 cups boiling, salted water
1 pound sausage, in bulk

Cook cornmeal in rapidly boiling salted water, and add sausage to mixture. Blend thoroughly. Rinse a loaf pan with cold water and pack in hot scrapple. Let stand in ice-box overnight, covered with waxed paper. Dip in beaten egg and fry until golden brown. Serve with spiced applesauce, cranberry sauce or maple syrup.

A variation of the ham 'n' eggs theme is this:

Frivolettes With Ham.
(Serves 6)

6 hard-cooked eggs, remove yolks
4 tablespoons grated cheese
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
Salt and pepper
Melted butter

Mash yolks and mix with cheese, butter, seasonings. Refill whites. Press together. Pour a rich cream sauce over them and sprinkle buttered crumbs over them. Brown a few minutes in a hot oven. Serve on browned circles of ham.

Vain Ambition

By

R. H. WILKINSON
Associated Newspapers—WNU Features.

"F A HEN," said Eben Langley, "having muddy feet, were to walk across a clean white sheet of paper, the impression inscribed thereon would be more intelligible than Harold Brickell's writing."

And with this, Eben began to carve around the inside of the bowl of his pipe with a jackknife, the blade of which testified to many previous carvings, and to chuckle softly.

"It couldn't be laid to inadequate schooling," Eben continued, tamping freshly cut plug into the cleaned bowl, "for despite the fact that Millstown was at that time little more than a clearing in the woodlot, we had a schoolhouse and a right smart schoolmaster. Harold's folks believed in education and the lad attended all the grades up to the ninth. No, it wasn't lack of schooling. It was simply that his fingers were the kind that looked more at home around the handles of a plow."

"Strange as it may seem, Harold was endowed with an imagination and a vague desire to do something besides pitch hay all his life. (Which fact, incidentally proved to be even more vague than we at first thought, for in the end, Harold made farming his life work and was contented.)

"It may have been because of a certain obstinacy which developed in Harold when nearing his 20s, or it may have been because of Schoolmaster Caleb Ricker's desperate attempt to improve the lad's penmanship, that led to the boy's ultimate decision.

"Three years after Harold terminated his attendance at school, he announced that he was going to be a writer. The announcement was astounding. At first Millstown's populace was inclined to ridicule the idea. A picture of Harold Brickell, who couldn't even write his name in legible style, earning his living writing stories, was quite beyond their grasp. And yet, when Harold persisted in stating that that was his chosen profession there were a few of us who displayed a certain amount of interest.

"After all, Millstown was considered a backwoods settlement then; we had sent no brilliant sons into the world to bring honor and fame to our community. And the mere fact that at least one among us was endowed with even an ambition to achieve some end besides raising an extra good crop of potatoes was something to get excited about.

"Our hopes, however, were short lived. Schoolmaster Ricker, who naturally was better equipped to predict the possibilities of such an ambition, looked at Harold with scorn and contempt; was by no means hesitant in stating emphatically that the remoteness of success was something about which we could laugh very heartily without fear of having the tables turned.

"As a matter of fact when we who had at first displayed interest in Harold's ambition, were shown a sample of the boy's penmanship and failed after an hour's close application (even though we made allowances for our own illiteracy) to decipher a single line, we were inclined to cast a vote in favor of the schoolmaster, agreeing to forget the incident.

"But our indifference and scorn in no way undermined Harold's decision. If one was to be a writer, he said, one must not be discouraged by the opinions of a few inexperienced, illiterate imbeciles. He did not, he further stated, expect the co-operation and support of his fellow townsmen. They could not possibly understand, simply because the scope of their vision was narrowed by routine to the extent of an acre of potatoes and perhaps a like area of silo corn. Most artists were forced to lead a lonely life, which, after all, was stimulating to the creative instincts.

"And thus having unburdened himself in a commendable fashion, Harold set about the task of making of himself a writer. He spent his idle moments scrawling signs and symbols on paper, which, when offered to curious acquaintances for perusal, proved meaningless and undecipherable. Yet to Harold the signs and symbols seemed to represent the expression of an inner genius that bubbled and boiled and sought an outlet. For in spite of everything he kept doggedly at his task and continued whenever opportunity offered to expound in detail about his career, and predicted for himself a great future.

"After awhile Harold's expounding became a little tiresome. Especially when the novelty of the idea had been tried and found wanting, and after we had conscientiously attempted to decipher three of the boy's completed manuscripts, succeeding only in starting an argument among ourselves over the possible meaning of certain signs that had a vague resemblance to English words. We began to suggest as gently as we could that Harold cease boring us with recitals concerning his wondrous genius and turn his efforts to the more remunerative subject of potatoes and corn.

"Unruffled, Harold continued to scrawl out his so-called stories and to berate us with predictions of what the future held in store for him. And at last, as a means of protection, Ned Feeley lost his temper and advised poor Harold that it was high time he snapped out of the state into which he had let himself fall, that his opportunity of becoming a writer was nil when you considered that there wasn't an editor in the world, including the most experienced translators of foreign languages, who could decipher his penmanship; and that every one in Millstown was fed up on hearing about it. Ned ended his little speech by offering to bet Harold that the boy would never make a cent out of writing, if he lived to be a thousand.

"This last remark served to silence Harold. He stood in the lobby of the post office, looking from one face to another, as though it were only now that the realization of how his fellow townsmen felt about it all, was brought home to him. There was a silence, during which some of us shifted uneasily and knew a sense of regret of Ned's condemning tone.

"But presently Harold shrugged his shoulders and turned away. At the door he paused and looked back, a hurt expression in his eyes, a grim determination about his mouth. 'I'll take the bet, Ned,' he said. 'And we'll make the time limit a year instead of a thousand.' Then he went out.

"For a time the bet between Ned and Harold stirred up no little excitement. Of course we all knew that Ned's money was safe, yet there was that hurt expression in Harold's eyes and the grimness about his mouth to remember and wonder at.

"However, a week later Harold Brickell was seen through the day plowing the lower lot on his farm and sowing it to corn. And it was generally noised about that the would-be author had conceded the bet.

"Of course we had no way of knowing that during the time Harold was following along behind the plow, his mind was at work. None of us were artistically inclined and we could not be blamed for not suspecting that it is at just such times as this that geniuses give birth to their most astounding inspirations.

"And when, three months later, the excitement over the bet having died down and everyone having practically forgotten about Harold's ambition, it was noticed that the lad was not hoeing corn in his lower lot for three days' running, no one guessed what he was up to. They attributed his absence to such things as pains in the stomach, or sun stroke.

"Little did we know that Harold in the very act of extracting a jungle weed from a potato hill, had been smitten with the idea of ideas promptly dropped his hoe, returned to the house and for three days thereafter labored with pen and ink in giving expression to the inspiration that he was sure was going to make him famous and win Ned's $200 bet.

"At the end of three days Harold emerged from his abode, a stubble of beard on his chin, his eyes red, and a carefully wrapped manuscript under his arm. He went at once to the post office and dispatched his precious burden by the evening mail. Then he sat down to wait, confident, triumphant, elated."

Eben paused in the telling of his tale and chuckled. And I urged impatiently: "Well, what happened? Was the story a good one? Did Harold win the bet?"

Eben shook his head. "Harold won the bet, but no one knows to this day whether the story was good or not. You see Harold was so positive that his yarn was a masterpiece, so afraid that it might become lost, that he insured the package for $100. Dave Sampson, the postmaster, managed with Harold's help, to read the address on the envelope, and dispatched the thing to New York. However, that was as far as it ever got.

"No one in New York could read Harold's writing hence the package was lost and Harold collected his $100 insurance money. He also collected his bet from Ned Feeley, because Ned was a good sport and after all, it couldn't be said that the lad hadn't made money from his writing. There was another inducement, too. Harold promised to go back to farming, which he did, and has been doing so every since."

Household Hints

Wash beans before soaking. Then they can be cooked or baked in the water in which they were soaked, with a small onion added.

Don't twist, bend or tie the so-called cord attached to your electric iron. It is not a cord, but two bundles of wires.

To prevent pitting and discoloration, food should not be left in aluminum ware any longer than is necessary.

Put a small piece of hard soap in the sewing basket to rub over yarn or thread so it can be put through the eye of a needle with less difficulty.

When Your Back Hurts—

And Your Strength and Energy is Below Par

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.
You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.
There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won countrywide approval than on something less favorably known. Doan's have been tried and tested many years. Are at all drug stores. Get Doan's today.

Inspectors Are Urgently Needed

There is an immediate and urgent need for hull inspectors, outfitting inspectors, electrical inspectors and joinery inspectors in the U. S. Maritime Commission, according to an announcement issued by the U. S. Civil Service Commission.

Vacancies now exist in shipbuilding centers in the area surrounding the Great Lakes. These positions pay salaries ranging from $2900 to $3800 per annum.

Men with shipbuilding experience or who have served as Ship's officers on sea going vessels or Great Lakes vessels are needed particularly, but men with considerable varied and responsible experience in allied fields may be qualified. College education in Marine Engineering, mechanical or electrical engineering, in naval architecture or architecture may be substituted for some of the experience requirements.

Complete information and the proper application blanks may be obtained from the local Secretary of the U. S. Civil Service Board of examiners located in each first and second class post office or from the seventh U. S. Civil Service District Office, Recruiting station, Room 1107, New Post Office building, Chicago.

Qualified persons are urged to make immediate application with the Seventh U. S. Civil Service District Office, Recruiting station, Room 1107, New Post Office Building, Chicago.

ABOUT CINCH BUGS

Examination of some fields of barley in particular reveal that there are moderate infestations of cinch bugs in Cook County. It has been several years since the county had a very bad infestation of bugs. At the present time the principle point of infestation is several miles to the south. Had it not been for the continued rains this spring it is probable that bugs would have caused a moderate amount of damage in the county. As it is, according to Farm Adviser C. A. Hughes, it is expected that the damage will be very slight this year. Barley seems to be a crop that attracts bugs early in the spring after they come out of winter quarters. At this time the small bugs are beginning to appear and they will go out of barley fields into corn fields.

While a new type of cinch bug barrier has been found it was not felt that the infestation in the county would justify the use of this material. We believe that the best system of control of cinch bugs is the improvement of soils so that crops will grow very rapidly and get away from cinch bug infestation. Barley and oats seem to induce the bugs to come in. If these are not next to a field of corn usually, there is not a great deal to fear. These young bugs will develop wings in a course of about two or three weeks after that time they will fly and usually go in to corn fields. The second brood will come from these bugs and will be found around silage making time.

At the scene of the blaze the parachutist first drops a parachute carrying a fire-fighting tool kit, then jumps, himself.

Added to distilled water, along with certain salts, pectin produces a fluid that effectively fills the depleted blood system of a patient until real blood can be built up by nutrition or transfusion.

Catholics Planning For Big Event September 13

Chicagoland Catholics from Cook, Kane, DuPage, Lake, Will and Grundy counties this week were informed of the theme of the Holy Name Holy Hour to be held in Soldier Field, Sept. 13.

The Most Rev. Archbishop Samuel A. Stritch, spiritual director of the Archdiocesan Union of Holy Name societies, announced that all Catholics attending the Holy Hour are to pray for "peace in justice and charity through the victory of our nation."

In proclaiming the theme of the giant religious spectacle Archbishop

Stritch said:

"We are engaged in a war to preserve the things which were granted to us in the gospel of Christ. We are eager to accord all men justice and charity which are so much a part of our lives. Yet, we are eager, earnest and intent upon securing victory and lasting peace. For this end, we now ask all Catholics in the Chicago archdiocese to pray."

All clergy attending the Holy Hour are to march in the solemn procession of Catholic ministry which heralds the opening of the religious demonstration. More than 1500 priests are expected to participate.

THE SUMMIT FARM

The Summit Farm. In early pioneer days the farm here shown was the old Bechstein homestead near Mokena. Later it was purchased by John Werner, and about 1875 it became the property of John Unbehaun and wife Caroline nee Werner.

About 1885 Summit Hill Station was founded at the southwest corner of this farm located 3 miles northeast of Mokena on the Rock Island railroad.

In 1907 this old homestead had been improved by the Unbehaun family to the stage shown in the picture and was named the Summit Farm.

At the left in foreground is John Wendel, uncle of John Unbehaun, Sr. Mr. Wendel at that time made his home with the Unbehaun family. In the center of foreground are Mr. and Mrs. John Unbehaun, Sr. and at the right is John Unbehaun, Jr., in his rubber tired rig, which before the advent of the automobile was quite an attraction.

Ernestine and Louise, sisters of John were already married when this picture was taken by John J. Unbehaun who finally ventured out into scenic America and on the Pacific ocean as a photographer and finally married and settled in Deshler, Neb., establishing the Deshler Art Studios and other enterprises. After just 20 years of western romance he returned to good old Illinois and established the Illinois Art Studio at Aurora, Ill. John attended our Mokena Home coming in 1941 and most likely will be here again this year to exchange smiles and greetings with old time friends.

On Sunday last was consummated the long looked for marriage of Miss Emma L. Jones, of Mokena, to Mr. Walter Metcalfe of Englewood, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Noble Jones of this place.

Mr. Jones, it will be remembered, is a member of the Board of Trade, of Chicago. Mr. Metcalfe is associated with him as a grain commissioner.

The wedding, though in high life, was nevertheless a quiet one, none but immediate relations being present.

Precisely at 12 o'clock, the bride and groom appeared in the front parlor, and taking a position at the south end of the room, were greeted by the minister, Rev. J. R. Woodcock, and the ceremony was performed. Pleasing congratulations were expressed to the young adventurers on life's untrodden sea.

Never did the bride look fairer as she stood attired in Maroon colored silk, wearing natural flowers of Tea Roses and Smilax at the throat and waist, or groom to better advantage as he appeared in a traveling suit of black.

After a brief interval, refreshments were served; and at 2 o'clock the bridal party left for New York, where the "Servia" of the Cunard line, will bear them to Liverpool, England, the groom's former home, and other countries will be visited, and after two months of pleasure seeing our popular and much missed friends will return.

Gifts were—set jewelry from the groom; silver sugar bowl, W. G. Jones; crystal fruit stand, Miss Minnie Jones; silver cake basket, Miss Emma McGovney; jelly stand, Wright Jones; silver card receiver, Miss Matie Jones, crystal and silver pickle dish, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Jones; gold bouquet holder, Mrs. Frank Edwards; silver butter dish, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Barnes; silver pie knife, Frank and Walter Barnes; ornament in bronze, Willarette Barnes; (last four from Southbridge, Mass.); silver cake stand, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Jones; china water pitcher, Miss Nellie Jones; Japanese card trays, Lottie Jones, elegant hang lamp, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Jones engraved silver napkin rings, Albert Jackson; whisp and toilet set, (plush) Miss Lina Brumond; half dozen silver fruit knives, Lizzie Pratt, Chicago, matt, Miss Nettie Cross, dressing case and pair elegant slippers, Miss Alice Barnes.

Remember Away Back?

Along in 1911 the Bowman Dairy Company of Chicago located a milk bottling plant at Mokena which for a number of years was the most flourishing business enterprise Mokena ever had.

The Bowman Co., bought milk from dairy farmers around Mokena, Frankfort, Marley, Alpine, New Lenox and other points. Milk was hauled by wagon to the plant which at one time employed about 25 local men with Preston Herd as the manager.

This dairy plant brought much business to Mokena and also to the Rock Island railroad, two refrigerators or cars of milk being shipped daily by express which meant a very substantial item of revenue each month.

they are:

Geo. Aschenbrenner, Aug. Plegler, Ed. Schenkel, Wm. Weber, John Schenkel, Aug. Teske, Fred Steinhagen, John Helenhouse, Wm. Werner, Howard Beagley and Aug. Werner.

The Bowman Dairy Co. closed up the Mokena plant quite a number of years ago. Later the Mitchell Brewing Co. opened a brewery in the former dairy. Upon the death of C. A. Mitchel, the brewery was discontinued and at present the building is occupied by the Mokena Wall Paper Mill which commenced operations a year ago.

At one time the dairy plant with all its equipment represented an investment of over $65,000. The plant had an up to date pasturizing system. Milk was bottled by machinery and the plant was in continuous operation seven days a week.

You and I Can Help

Let's not brag how strong we are
For that alone won't get us far,
Let's not tattle all we hear
Lest some Axis spys be near.

Let's do the very best we can Shoulder to shoulder, and man to man,
Let's keep our Faith that Right makes Might,
If we try hard enough we'll win this fight.

Tis no time now to sit and shirk
Let's all get down and really work;
Let's put our shoulders to the wheel
And make that "darned" old axis reel.

Action is the thing we need
No politicians or personal greed
We've got to pull together,
Be it fair or stormy weather.

We can do it if we try
Let's pull together you and I,
Sure, it means we'll sacrifice,
But come on "Pal" its worth the price.

What we do here at home is small
Compared to the boys who give "their all";
Those boys are never slow
When they go out to meet the foe.

They know decisive action counts
If the enemy they trounce;
They're in where the fight is thickest,
Getting there first, and being the quickest.

'Tis no time now to bicker round all day
While those brave boys the enemy alay.
We've got to deliver planes, tanks and guns
Out to America's brave fighting sons.

We must let no clouds of doubt
E're blot clear thinking out;
We must, we can, we will,
Tho the road be rough, and the pull up-hill.

We've got to scrimp, and toil and slave
Our pennies, dimes and dollars save,
To buy War Bonds for things they need,
To overcome the Axis greed.

CUE TO BARBECUE

Max O. Cullen, nationally-famous barbecue expert, shows Muriel Barr, young M-G-M. starlet, how simple it is to barbecue meat. Pete Smith, producer of short subjects bearing his name, looks on as Cullen illustrates the correct method for turning a steak during the filming of "Barbee-Cues."

Backyard Barbecue Solves War's Entertainment Problem

With the entire nation seeking simpler means of entertainment because of war time requirements, the old-fashioned barbecue is rapidly growing in popularity. Backyard barbecues are becoming quite the style from California to Maine.

Old timers at this business of barbecuing have developed it into a fine culinary art, and in this connection Max O. Cullen, nationally known barbecue and carving expert, has brought out some new wrinkles for the handling of those old stand-bys, hamburgers and frankfurters.

Why does a frankfurter curl? Well, that's a problem that has bothered many a host, but if you're having a barbecue party and you want your franks to lie slim and straight as they nicely brown, try Cullen's little trick, as taken from the M-G-M. Pete Smith specialty, "Barbee-Cues."

First, slice the frank lengthwise down one side without cutting entirely through the casing, turn it over and slice parallel to the first slice. Then it opens up like an idly growing in popularity. Backyard barbecues are becoming quite the style from California to Maine.

Anybody can barbecue meat, Cullen points out, if they will only remember these pointers: live coals, not a flame, should be used as a source of heat—charcoal briquettes are good. Steaks and chops should run an inch or more in thickness, and need be turned only once in cooking. Surplus fat should be trimmed away so it will not drip into the coals and flame up.

If you'd like a hamburger barbecue, take another hint from Cullen's repertoire and satisfy everybody's taste. Make your hamburger into a ball and barbecue it slowly until the outside is well done. Then, slice it into three parts and you have two well-done pieces for those who like it that way, and one rare piece—the center—for those who like their meat rare. Cullen personally guarantees that barbecue fans will go for hamburgers prepared this way.
